THE VEIL REMOVED.

How the Statues of Webster and Stark Look.

Webster is Clad in a Dress Coat and Choker.

STARK IS A SOLDIER.

Wears the Continental Uniform and Grasps a Sword.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.-The veiling that has concealed the statues of Daniel Weisster and General John Starke, which have been placed in the extreme north end of Statuary hall in the National Capitel as the gift of the people of the state of New Hampshire was quietly removed at noon yesterday, and the public was examine witnesses. for the first time permitted. It will appear from the submitted to look upon these latest correspondence that the agreement addition to the national collection of memorial figures. The unveiling ceremony was as simple as it was possible to make it, and consisted of lifting from the murble columns the shrouds of canvass with which they were covered. There were, however, quite an assemblage of people, including Governor Smith of New Hampshire and stuff, in the hall until the well was cart aside. When the 6 ares were disclosed there was a soun of applause from the New Humpshire men. The face of Webster shows its characteristic vigor, although there is a benignant expression not shown in the usual prints and busts of the great orator. He stands erect, clad in old-time dress coat and choker, his left hand grasping a roll of manuscript. General Starks wears the Continental uniform, and his right hand holds the hilt of a sheathed sword. Governor able mith and staff expressed great satis-

The senate and house both took ap-propriate action upon the reception of the works of art, but not in the hall where the statues stood. There were appropriate speeches and resolutions, but these proceedings were conducted by each body in its own hall of general meeting. The list of speakers included the two senators from New Hampshire Messey, Chaptharand Gillians. shire, Messra Chan Her and Gallinger, who spoke impartially of the subjects of both statues; the two Massachusetts senators, Massas, Hoar and Lodge, who devoted themselves to the life and services of Webster, and Senator- Morgan, Morrill, Davis, Cul-lom, Platt and Mitchell of Oregon, who also spoke of Mr. Webster, while Sonators Proctor and Dubo's confined their remarks to General Starke. to the house the Starke speeches were made by Messes, Baker, Powers, Curtis and Blair, and the Webster speeches by Blair, Everett, Grout and The speeches were, without exception, carefully prepared rethe men to whom the day was de-

Tells About the Behring Sea-English

Claims Settlement. Gresham yeaterday sent to the bouse, in answer to a resolution calling for an explanation of his reasons for acranging with Great Britain for the payment of claims of British sealing New Men Are Employed to Disvessels, the following letter:

The Paris tribunal of arbitration held that the United States had no right of protection of property in the fur seals in the Behring sea outside the ordinary three mile limit.

If the plan of settlement recom-mended by the president in his au-nual message is not acceptable to congress, the remaining controverted questions must be determined either by the organization of a joint com-mission or by negotiations between the two governments. Experience has shown that international commissions are slow and expensive. Should such a course be resorted to, the evidence would be found mostly on the Pacific coast, widely scattered, and counsel would be needed to examine and cross-to pay a lump sum of $425 000 in full settlement of demands authorized to be made under the treaty and award was proposed by this government. The amount is considerably below the damages claimed by Great Britalu, exclusive of interest, for a number of years.

If this agreement does not receive the approval of congress and the disputed questions are submitt d to an international commission, it is believed that the amounts allowed and the expense of the tribuna', including witnesses and the talring of testimony, will largely exceed $425,000, In view of all the facts and what may be reasonably expected as the result of a commission, the under-signed submits that a prompt and final settlement of the vexatious controversy by an appropriation of the lump sum be agreed upon is advis-
